Senator Hoar's reply to various questions asked him in the House of Commons last evening about the eighteen telegrams he said he then omitted neither the friends nor enemies of Gen. Grant would have appeared intolerable a few weeks ago. It is announced that the British Government has found it impossible to obtain a sufficient number of able seamen to man the ships ordered to prepare for service. The Lord Mayor of London presided at an indignation-meeting called to denounce the extinction for their support of the navy.

FALSE REPORTS.

The week go away from home to learn the news. The Eastern financial newspapers are filled with alarming statements of the condition of Chicago. The citizens will be surprised to learn that a reign of terror exists here, and that the city is in the hands of a mob. The Boston Sugar, for instance, informs us that righteous councilmen have been murdered in most of the wards; that an attack in force has been made upon the City Clerk's office for the purpose of stealing the ballot-boxes; that a riot has been threatened to drive up the Board of Trade; that the City and County Buildings are guarded by an armed force; that the Socialists, who meet with locked doors, are unlearning with the Committee of Public Safety; and that "the Police element seems to be in a fair way to produce a conviction of enormous dimensions, including the destruction of the city by fire." And Baltimore is kept The Tribune informs it "in several articles, moderately, and sluggishness to fear."

Well, this is sufficiently doubtful, and, as the Eagle says, to believe what it says, we do not wonder it is alarmed. It will find matter perhaps where the person is that it has been hugged upon by some mad dog. Or rightness sometimes have been found; as one such has been made, having [illegible] other; so also a [illegible] by the Board of Trade has [illegible] public buildings; no alliance has been made between the Socialists and Committee of Public Safety; and the "Parties element" has no intention of burning up the city.

The motive in Chicago is clearly this, and we will state it for the benefit of the Eagle and other Eastern papers of the East: There has recently been a municipal election, and upon the face of the returns brought in by the police Carter Harrison appears to have been elected by a hundred or so majority. As the Republican committee has evidences that outsiders from some wards were illegally voted at the polls, Judge Smith, the Republican candidate, has determined to contest the election, and the better classes of citizens here also determined that there shall be a fair count and fair play. Only this and nothing more, except the very natural excitement expressed by men whose their rights have been trampled upon and denied them. They feel just as the editor of the Eagle would feel if, when he went to the polls in Brooklyn, a gang of roughs should take his ticket away from him and tell him he could not vote, and if he protested, in claiming his right should knock him down or forcibly drag him out of line and drive him off.

Chicago never was more peaceful than now. She is going to the opera every night about 15,000 strong and having a good time. Policemen are scarcer here than are required as ever. A score or two of Knox County farmers, good every Sunday and enjoy their visit, while as they have been doing for years past, solely paying any attention to them. The police and thugs are taken care of by the packers, who are no better than other packers; and no one is disturbed except Carter Harrison, who is in a state of gloom and a terror of apprehension lest he does not have been elected after all—a result which would not be regarded as a calamity by any one but Carter Harrison himself and his genuine and the gentlemen who enjoy his protection in the conduct of their unlawful and nefarious business.

APPROPRIATE RECEPTION OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The extraordinarily festive demonstration which the Lord of Cork made upon the occasion of the visit of their next King—the Prince of Wales—is one city reveals the excitement characteristics and throws vividly question to the reverential people. It was evidently their intention to make the visit an enjoyable and memorable one, and to give him a taste of genuine Irish life, particularly in its political phases, so that they [illegible] [illegible] would have a lasting recollection of the real character of his subjects, and at the same time to have a bit of fun themselves and a day of out-and-out enjoyment.

[illegible] when the Prince entered the corporate limits he met processions, the two [illegible] Loyalists and Nationalists, or, as we would call them in this country, Democrats and Republicans, arrayed themselves in their best clothes for a match—the contest being the Irishman's highest conception of genuine diversion. The Loyalists marched on one side, singing "God Save the Queen," and the Nationalists marched on the other side, singing "God Save Ireland," each side with about [illegible] of drums, interspersed with vigorous [illegible] and spirited cheering of partisans. Between the two came [illegible] the Prince and Princess with his green gown on each party's wing. Distinguished were offered them; on the other hand, both factions did their utmost to entertain them. To be sure, a rotten egg struck a gentleman in the procession intended for a gentleman in the other procession accidentally went out of its natural course, but it did not injure the Prince. It might [illegible] presence of one of the latters and did no more damage than to have an ingress upon [illegible] gown which the embarrassed man hastily removed and to render the latter's presence somewhat obnoxious to the nose of [illegible] during the remainder of the entertainment.

After the animal features of the program had been finished the athletic sports of the day began. The two factions led feat of each other to the entertainment and edification of the favorable Prince. After being witnessed all the [illegible] [illegible], eggs, dead cats and rats, stones and brickbats in their immediate vicinity the athletic were brought into action. Wherever a head was seen it was hit, regardless of the person to whom the head belonged or of the government to displayed in carrying out this brilliant and diversified program. The Nationalists routed the Loyalists' heads and one cross, and when a Nationalist could not find a Loyalist he then vented one of his [illegible] [illegible]. Heads were oriented with the utmost [illegible] [illegible] the center of conspicuity since determining the complexion of the prettiest courtesy.

When blood had been manifold—the victorious side being "right the Government"—they turned their attention to the police, and as the latter were on something the same footing with them in the matter of respect the fun became fast and furious. Canvas were crashed on each side, cudgels were [illegible] upon with impunity, were hitherto and shown were noted, and the entertainment did not halt until the Irish shouts were mostly with [illegible] [illegible], and [illegible] of enthusiasm.

But the enthusiasm was not out-spent. The women and children took a hand in, and from the vantage points of roofs and windows [illegible] stones and all sorts of domestic garbage and discarded utensils and their contents down upon the heads of the gay revelers. Then, as one good turn deserves another, the revelers took down flags, standard to the contents of stores, turned them the orange and green flags and decorations and [illegible] and made bonfires of them along the line of march. It was a most enthusiastic ovation and probably the most brilliant pageant the ancient City of Cork has witnessed since the Danes held its sway. There have the halls of Dunrobin rang another peals. Every [illegible] great event looked down upon such an outpouring of the revelling, merry children of Cork. There has been there no event in the enlargement of their heart's content. It was a great day for Cork.

The Prince and Princess evidently enjoyed the pageant which was instituted in their honor. It gave them an opportunity to become acquainted with their enthusiastic and happy subjects, their political views, and their standing ways and amusing habits of life. The Prince himself was so delighted that he publicly expressed his regret to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] frequently and his determination hereafter to visit them at least once a year. The Princess grew [illegible] dearly did the heroines. The Prince had a good time. The Princess had a good time and [illegible] [illegible] was enjoyed [illegible] the authorities before whom [illegible] were indicted with the [illegible] were.

LARGELY CRUEL ORIGINALS OF CRUEL ORIGIN.

All political parties have been so profuse in their declarations in favor of "what the people believe" and "honest for the honestest," that it was hoped a change of administration might result in some benefit to the dishonest citizens. The present Administration, however, seems even more opposed to the rights of the farmers than the last. Nothing apparently has been done to serve out the sentence for opening the country to settlement, and only the Eastern corners are prepared for enforcing the use of the military against the settlers. The cattle syndicate and monopolies encroach the government's forces.

It is vaguely announced that Secretary Lamar has the decision on the proceedings of the trustee of 1882. What he may find in these documents to support the idea that Oklahoma is still "Indian country" can only be conjectured. The language used to such evidence is that the Indians "were and enemy to the United States" the land described. By way of preamble it is said that this is done "in compliance with the desire to locate other Indians and freedmen thereon." Indians, whites, and negroes are not included in the treaties of 1866, nor are their conditions of life. In the case the United States offered a sufficient consideration and the Indians gave their consent and formally ceded and transferred the territory. The Indians abandoned the country, and the Government had it surveyed and recorded; practically no one lived in other cases when the Indian title was extinguished, and with the consent of the authorities the settlers sometimes were afterwards permitted to go in and take entrance possession.

It is said, however, that Oklahoma must be regarded as "Indian country" under the [illegible] provisions of the Indian Intercourse Act of 1834, as follows:

"In all countries that at the date of the United States [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the States of Missouri and Louisiana, and that part of the United States east of the Mississippi River not within any State, to which the Indian title has not been extinguished, for the purposes of this act is Indian country."

Oklahoma is not in the list of the United States [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The Performance Halted by an Unusual Proceeding at the Close of the First Act.

A Reprieve Got Good-humored Tickets Did Soon Be Duly Distributed —A Criticism.

The very visible effect of the night's last weather upon the audience at the Opera Festival was to be observed in the selection of the ladies, which were somewhat scattered. It would, consequently, and after a brilliant succession of successful and after a brilliant succession of successful the storm which was an incident of the gale the patron of the who-to-the road gave a variable significance that was fairly impressive. The audience was a very large one, only a few seemingly were being left and standing-room was scarce. Both friends and family received handsome gifts of flowers. At the conclusion of the third act, which ended with a duet between Gerada and Di Anna, Miss Nevada was presented with a floral tribute [illegible] by count [illegible] of the first flash with the orchestra. Before the close of the evening it, too, was unable to get it off. The audience which followed to the end of the act, and the [illegible] Commissioner over the Chicago Opera Festival, was in the habit of [illegible] Signorina, who, as many [illegible] Chancellor, Opera Festival, Chancellor [illegible] Festival, Chancellor [illegible] Festival, Chancellor [illegible]

Protest Obstruction of the Bill to Repeal the Illegal Railroad Law.

Electoral Reform Considered in the Senate—Resolutions for the Penitentiary Commissionerships.

Review Of the Washington Delay Incident to the Democratic Election Day Row Fight.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 16.—[Special.]—In the Senate today Senator Vaughn (Democrat), chairman of the Judiciary committee, made a special order on several matters. Senator Bell on the Democratic side said he desired to vote for the bill with some of his colleagues. Question by Vaughn: Is authority and effect as exempt some enterprises the same as the Free Bank City bill, under which the contracts are now issued for agency. It also made provision for some of the alleged unsettled matters. Question: Ought to be no question of law. Senator Vaughn: Ought to be unanimous agreement, but to secure prompt action accepted it. Then the gentlemen before Democrats, under the leadership to vote the bill to him to plead on the calendar. Also pending to which there would be no chance of its passing this session. The bill was read by Senator Gridley, who had presented a petition to the effect that the property of which said act to the Railroad Company, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company, and others, was exempted from taxation by the provisions of the act of the session of the General Assembly of the State of Illinois, entitled "An act to incorporate railroad companies," approved February 16, 1849, and the several acts amendatory thereof, and that the property of said companies was assessed and taxed in accordance with the provisions of said act, and that the said act was unconstitutional and void, and praying that the said act be repealed. Senator Gridley moved that the petition be referred to the Committee on Judiciary. Senator Bell moved that the petition be referred to the Committee on Railroads
